DOMINIONS PLACE IN G.B. DIPLOMACY

LONDON, Eng., Aug. 2. — The dominions which was given to the question of the Anglo-Japanese treaty by the Imperial cabinet, which has decided to sit down and the opportunity which was thus given to the representatives of the dominions to express their views on the question of the imperial aspect of British foreign policy, and other matters in relation to foreign affairs if necessary, appears to have been the change of status of the colonies.

There is no manner of doubt if the dominions had not been consulted, it would unanimously have decided to support the mother country in her war against Germany. The fact remains, however, that they were not consulted, and they were drawn as active participants into the greatest conflict the world has known. This has opened their eyes to the possibility in the future of being involved in another struggle, in which, perhaps, the system of dominions would be the cause of a turn or twist of the foreign policy of Great Britain, concerning which they have not been consulted. The best opportunity of expressing an opinion or controlling its course. This unsatisfactory state of affairs, obviously caused by the fact that the dominions have been the first to recognize this in most practical manner by postponing the consideration of the imperial, or otherwise, of the Anglo-Japanese treaty, until all the dominions were given the opportunity of examining the whole question, especially because the part would have over their own dominions.

Strenuous Initiation

Though young in knowledge of the practical side of foreign affairs, the recent extension of their powers act as a veritable furnace, and taking into consideration the almost entirely naval aspect of European policy at the present time, the dominions of the British Commonwealth may be said to have come up with the motherland in this matter as fast with continental ambitions as the motherland herself. This is not, of course, the case, as the past few years have shown that the dominions have had such sudden and dramatic reversals of fortune as are invaluable for understanding the nature of their future development, but at the same time it is the admitted that the dominions are not the admiring but the practical side of foreign affairs, will now steer and through that the few years of such experiences outweigh in importance the mere fact of their whole destiny.

This being so, it is a natural and instant call in the dominions not only to be consulted in regard to British foreign policy, but also to have some sort of deciding voice in their interests are directly concerned.

Admittedly to play their parts in this, a carrying out of their functions of foreign policy, the dominions will have strenuously to exert themselves, for, as H. D. Hall, the constitutional expert, has said, "the lack of ignorance of foreign affairs and lack of interest in foreign policy, which has so often been depicted in England and for that matter, than in the mother country. In the view of the dominions, in a vague way, that they have had no interest in national affairs but, as stated, they have since learned to their bitter cost that a sudden turn in foreign policy may mean the end of the whole destiny. Mr. Hall has proposed that the setting up of foreign affairs committees in each dominion would be one of the best means of arousing an intelligent interest among the people, of enabling the legislative branch to have effective control over the Foreign Secretary responsible to it, and to insist upon the ability of the worst features of their diplomatic service."

Committee Government

It would have been of the greatest value if questions which were to be discussed in the Imperial assembly or in imperial conference could be referred to the committees in each dominion for preliminary survey. It is also well known that the leading members of such standing committees on foreign affairs as may be set up would be in the dominions, and the responsibility of the committee. This would be special importance in the case of any dominion which had to do with the carrying out of its foreign policy through the British foreign office instead of setting up a department of its own.

Most of the imperial committees would afford the only opportunity to the members of such dominion to come into personal contact with the British Foreign Secretary and to pass judgment on his policy so far as it affected the particular dominion. Such personal contacts would be most important for the larger dominions, if they added to great extent, the practical side of foreign affairs, and questions of group policy through the British Foreign Secretary as the head of the group.

What the dominions may ultimately be devised for, and giving effect to the views of the dominions in regard to foreign policy, there can be no question as to the beneficial trend toward the permanent peace of the world which their entry into international politics will bring about. The dominions, however, are not the only ones who are developing a sense of the method of peaceful arbitration for the settlement of disputes, rather than an appeal to arms, which the great war has shown can only end in disaster, a varying degree to all concerned. It is but natural that the younger units of the British Commonwealth should desire to have great territories to develop and this development requires all their energies and devotion.

The international questions discussed at the imperial cabinet were indeed weighty, but the signs of a desire to go to all intents and purposes to make the birth not of one nation but of several, and these nations must, with the beloved status of the colonies.

There is no manner of doubt if the dominions had not been consulted, it would unanimously have decided to support the mother country in her war against Germany. The fact remains, however, that they were not consulted, and they were drawn as active participants into the greatest conflict the world has known. This has opened their eyes to the possibility in the future of being involved in another struggle, in which, perhaps, the system of dominions would be the cause of a turn or twist of the foreign policy of Great Britain, concerning which they have not been consulted. The best opportunity of expressing an opinion or controlling its course. This unsatisfactory state of affairs, obviously caused by the fact that the dominions have been the first to recognize this in most practical manner by postponing the consideration of the imperial, or otherwise, of the Anglo-Japanese treaty, until all the dominions were given the opportunity of examining the whole question, especially because the part would have over their own dominions.

FINAL ACT IN IRISH DRAMA DRAWS NEAR

LONG, Aug. 1.—Negotiations in the peace negotiations between Premier Lloyd George and leaders of the Irish Republic are imminent, it was reported here today, but government leaders refused to lift the veil of secrecy. There was certain despatch from the arrival in Dublin yesterday morning of Mr. O'Brien, president of the Gaelic League in London, but they could not be verified.

One rumor was to the effect that Mr. O'Brien was the courier who would take the Sinn Fein reply to Mr. Lloyd George. Another source declared that Eamon de Valera would himself return to London during the coming week and that Sir John Crail, the secretary of Ulster, was also coming to this city. It was also reported that members of the Irish Republican Army, who had been expected to meet during the coming week, had made preparations to receive him in Dublin. The British government was declared to be ready to release imprisoned members of the Republican parliament immediately after his arrival, but date upon which body he would meet.

It was admitted in Sinn Fein quarters that there was a considerable difference of opinion among members of the Sinn Fein regarding the concessions to be demanded from England. Some members were declared to be adhering resolutely to the demand for a "virtual independence" and for this predictions were made that the meeting of the Dail Eireann when held will probably develop into still another meeting of leaders who were represented as being resolved to adopt a compromise measure.

It was maintained, however, that Mr. De Valera and his immediate colleagues retained control of the situation and would carry the principle of compromise against the demands of extremists.

PREMIER MEIGHEN SAILS FOR CANADA

LONDON, July 30.—Premier Brant last evening headed to Lord Hardinge, the British ambassador, the reply of France approved by the cabinet yesterday, and the attitude of the government of the firmness with which Great Britain has always adhered to the policy of close co-operation and mutual control of the allied governments.

The Times, however, although somewhat exhausted from hard work during the last few days, was in good spirits. He said: "The general expression of the unfailing kindness shown him and his party everywhere during his stay in England just before the election of Mr. Meighen was handed a beautiful bouquet by one of the many English ladies who had come to bid him adieu."

The Times, in an editorial this morning, praises Mr. Meighen as being a man of great ability, who, with his tact, and adds both in England and Canada this self-restraint has been greatly valued. The influence of Canada in the cabinet, it said, is undoubted. The Times says, has always been very great, and if Mr. Meighen succeeds in the test of seat and in the ballot, he will be quick to differ with him on that point.

Dates of Elections

OTTAWA, July 30 (C. A. Press)—With the return of Premier MacKenzie to Ottawa about the end of next week, it is expected that many questions which have been held over for his attention will be answered. The most important of these will be the setting of dates for the L.D.-elections to be held in West York, and the date of the general election. The West York writ was issued some time ago, from Toronto, it was stated, in preparation for a dissolution of parliament, but, as far as the French communists are concerned, the date of the general election will be the setting of dates for the L.D.-elections to be held in West York.

On the principle of joint allied representation, Sir Edward and other friends of the L.D. have, however, it is clearly impossible, the note continues, for Great Britain to agree to such a dissolution of parliament at this time. Sir George Foster, acting premier, stated that it would be necessary to call the election by the date of the dissolution of the alliance.

His return will also revive the talk of the possibility of a dissolution which is expected to be the subject of the matters discussed in cabinet shortly after the premier returns. Some of the government's friends are still clinging to a agitation for early dissolution and general election, while others are equally as insistent as to the holding of a dissolution unless there is a redistribution measure passed by parliament.

Confidential attention is being paid to the choice of places shown by the immediate return of Hon. C. C. Ballantyne, minister of naval affairs, from Mr. Ballantyne's absence it was reported that he would remain in Ottawa until the fall, when he would remain in the capital for a month or two after the ending of the conference, as far as possible, to enable him to make an auto tour with his family. His return within a few days of the premier's giving rise to much comment as to the future of the development, since the fall cabinet is gathered together in Ottawa again.

SESSION OF SUPREME COUNCIL AUGUST 8th

PARIS, Aug. 1.—It has been definitely decided that the next session of the international commission on the question of Upper Silesia will be convened in Paris beginning August 8th.

The date was proposed for the meeting was August 4, but Lord Curzon, the British secretary for foreign affairs, asked that week in the final British note of the correspondence with France over the Silesian question that August 8 be selected as Premier Bonomi of Italy would be unable to attend sooner, and this date has now been definitely selected.

Demand Safe Passage

PARIS, Aug. 1.—Baron A'Beirn, the British ambassador to Germany, has received instructions from his government to associate himself with Charles Lanoe, the French ambassador to Berlin, in the demand for the safe passage through Upper Silesia according to British advice yesterday.

Belgium, it is believed, will be invited to attend the meeting of the international commission on Upper Silesia to be held in Berlin.

One rumor was to the effect that Mr. O'Brien was the courier who would take the Sinn Fein reply to Mr. Lloyd George. Another source declared that Eamon de Valera would himself return to London during the coming week and that Sir John Crail, the secretary of Ulster, was also coming to this city. It was also reported that members of the Irish Republican Army, who had been expected to meet during the coming week, had made preparations to receive him in Dublin. The British government was declared to be ready to release imprisoned members of the Republican parliament immediately after his arrival, but date upon which body he would meet.

It is understood the council will discuss means for giving aid to famine-stricken Russia and probably will examine the Far East situation.

BRITISH VIEWPOINT WILL BE SUPPORTED BY ITALY

PARIS, July 30.—The committee on foreign affairs of the chamber of deputies yesterday discussed the Silesian question and decided to adhere to the British viewpoint of not sending more troops to Upper Silesia pending the meeting of the allied supreme council.

France Gets Reply

In view of the perplexity arising by the tone of the last French note, the British government, the note states, feels bound to require what explanations of the intentions of the French government can, as until the note is cleared up it will be difficult to see what is the allied co-operation can continue.

The contemplated extension of irrigation will cause the Stirling district to bloom as the rose.

Harvesting has already started and will be in full swing next week.

Mrs. Ivie, Sr. and Mrs. Ivie, Jr. were visitors in Lethbridge last Tuesday.

A statistician finds that more than a hundred tons of wood are consumed daily in the form of matches. Borrow your light from another and help conserve our forests.

On the principle of joint allied representation, Sir Edward and other friends of the L.D. have, however, it is clearly impossible, the note continues, for Great Britain to agree to such a dissolution of parliament at this time. Sir George Foster, acting premier, stated that it would be necessary to call the election by the date of the dissolution of the alliance.

MISS A. M. WILSON

Reach & Co.

We have piped unto you, yet you have not danced . . . and advertised to you by signs or tokens on the counters, in the show cases or the street windows. It also failed to rouse you from the apathy that possesses your intellect. The time is coming on when you will have to wear leather goods and rubbers. The prices won't be lower than last year, so we thought that by putting in the window Men's, Boys', Youths' and Women's Shoes in canvas with leather and rubber soles, at pure unadulterated cost, that you would avail yourselves of the chance to buy at these cheap prices before you had to buy leather at three and four times the cost. It seems as if some of you are bad managers. With half an eye open and brain bogged with 1%, it still should glimmer through the mental haze you are in and make you commence to save while there is yet time.
